Q3 Regional Review

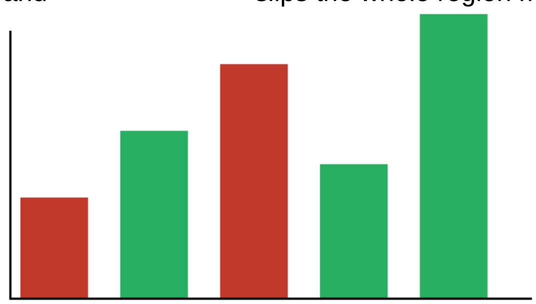
Northern region held steady through the quarter despite the supply delays that hit every distribution hub in the first six weeks, and the team still closed within two points of the original commit for the period. Fulfilment recovered once the second carrier came online, and backlog cleared by the final week without the overtime the plan had budgeted for.

Southern accounts grew on the back of two large renewals, though margin slipped as discounting crept into the final stage of each deal and set an expectation the field will have to unwind before the next cycle begins. Two further deals were pulled forward from the coming quarter, which flatters this result and leaves a visible

forecast has no

Eastern pipeline looks thin for the coming quarter and needs attention now rather than in the review that nobody schedules until the numbers have already slipped and the recovery has become a great deal more expensive. Coverage is concentrated in three names, and if any one of them slips the whole region misses,

er



Northern	1,240	on track
Southern	980	at risk
Eastern	610	on track
Western	1,455	at risk